Malt Beverage Cost Recovery Fee Figures – HB 2535

A fee of $32 per barrel -- or approximately 10.1 cents per 12-ounce bottle or can -- assessed on large breweries that sell more than 125,000 barrels annually in Oregon. (No Oregon brewery would pay the fee.)

Amount raised per biennium -- $121.6 million by OLCC estimate

How the money would be spent:

- $42.025 million to counties for addiction prevention and treatment, divided on the basis of population
- $12.16 million to counties for addiction prevention and treatment, divided equally
- $8.43 million to cities for law enforcement related to addiction and mental health, divided on the basis of population
- $8.43 million to counties for law enforcement related to addiction and mental health, divided on the basis of population
- $8.43 million for a statewide addiction prevention program
- $8.43 million to counties for local prevention programs, divided on the basis of population
- $8.43 million to Department of Human Services for statewide chemical dependency and mental health residential treatment
- $8.43 million to counties for public health programs related to alcohol and drug abuse, divided on the basis of population
- $8.43 million for drug courts
- $8.43 million for drug-free housing
